Hebrews 13:1-8

If you ever need an example of what it means to imitate someone and be like them, spend some time with a toddler.

The author of Hebrews begins Chapter 13 instructing the readers in the ways of living as a follower of Christ: love one another, show hospitality to strangers, remember those in prison, honor marriage and be free from greed. After this list comes a reminder we may not think of often: remember your leaders and imitate their faith.

We are not called to simply like our leaders or support them. We are called to copy their faith. Think about your leaders right now. Are you emulating their faith? Could you say that you, like our toddler, are soaking up what God is teaching you through your leaders and then imitating them?

Spend time this week considering your leaders faith and how that would look imitated in your life.
