Job 24:1-12

Have you looked around the world recently? There are so many things that need fixing. There are wars that don't stop. There is poverty that seems to be unconquerable. We constantly hear about life-altering diseases. There are natural disasters that we are powerless against. Why doesn't God intervene? Why doesn't God step in and make things right, especially for his people?

Job asked questions. We ask questions also. Job didn't appear to get any answers. And more often than not, it appears we don't get answers either, do we? At least we don't get answers that satisfy us.

I have no answers for these questions. Frankly, I don't think anyone has exact answers for these questions except, of course, God! After all, the truth is, God is in charge, whether we see him acting or not.

Should we stop asking questions? Not necessarily, as long as we accept God's answer whenever he wants and however he wants to answer. After all, he is God.
