Micah 4:1-7

The tombs of ancient human beings have been discovered with tools and weapons buried with the deceased. Evidently they thought these items would be needed later. This and many other evidences make me believe that human beings have been hard-wired by the creator to believe in an afterlife.

Micah 4:5 suggests that every person has a religious nature that makes them want to claim some god. It speaks of “all” nations walking in the name of their gods. “All the nations” worshipped something. Those who did not know the true God, created their own. We naturally believe that there is much mystery beyond this life. Some might say they are atheists but even those folks worship something—perhaps their own so-called “genius.”

We Christians have decided to “walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever.” This was the secret of Israel’s strength through the generations. We celebrate the wonderful blessing of knowing the name to whisper as we breathe our last breath.
